

with the question which has been discussed in cases dealing with the effect of the taxation of gross receipts derived from interstate commerce.<sup>1</sup> Without going into that question, it is sufficient again to point out that the tax is not laid upon gross receipts but upon the "excess of all bills and accounts receivable over bills and accounts payable." The effect upon interstate commerce, as in other instances of non-discriminatory property taxation, is at most indirect and incidental. See United States Glue Co. v. Oak Creek, 247 U. S. 321, 329; Shaffer v. Carter, 252 U. S. 37, 57.

The judgment is reversed and the cause is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

---

DETROIT TRUST CO., TRUSTEE, v. THE THOMAS
BARLUM ET AL.*

CERTIORARI TO THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT.

No. 13. Argued October 12, 1934.—Decided November 5, 1934.

1. A court of admiralty has no jurisdiction of a suit to foreclose a mortgage on a ship, in the absence of an Act of Congress conferring such jurisdiction. P. 32.
2. "Preferred mortgages" of ships under the Ship Mortgage Act of 1920 include deeds of trust securing bonds sold to the public and under that statute are foreclosable exclusively in admiralty, with priority of lien as therein prescribed, if indorsement upon ship's documents, recording, and other conditions expressed in the statute have been fulfilled. P. 32.

---

<sup>1</sup> See Fargo v. Michigan, 121 U. S. 230; Philadelphia & Southern Steamship Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326; Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Texas, 210 U. S. 217; Crew Levick Co. v. Pennsylvania, 245 U. S. 292, 295; Cudahy Packing Co. v. Minnesota, 246 U. S. 450, 453; New Jersey Telephone Co. v. Tax Board, 280 U. S. 338, 349.

* Together with No. 14, Detroit Trust Co., Trustee, v. The John J. Barlum et al., certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

3. The status of "preferred mortgages" does not depend upon application of the borrowed money to maritime uses. This condition is not expressed in the Act and can not be implied. P. 37.

So held in view of the minute and explicit provisions of the Act; its legislative history, showing that the objective was to foster our merchant marine by making ship mortgages, including deeds of trust securing bonds, safe and attractive to investors; and the importance to this purpose of having the jurisdiction to foreclose—in admiralty exclusively or in state courts exclusively—determinable by precise statutory conditions rather than by extrinsic criteria raising a host of questions as to the application of the proceeds of loans.

4. Congress, under Art. III, § 2, and Art. I, § 8, par. 18 of the Constitution, has paramount power to determine the maritime law which shall prevail throughout the country; but in so doing it is necessarily restricted to the sphere of the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, the boundaries of which are determined by the exercise of the judicial power. P. 42.
  5. In order to promote investment in shipping securities and thus to advance the maritime interests of the United States, Congress has power, by amendment of the maritime law, to regulate the priorities of mortgage and other liens on ships and to provide jurisdiction in admiralty for the enforcement of such mortgages. Bogart v. The John Jay, 17 How. 399, considered. P. 48.
  6. There is no ground for denying this power when the proceeds of the mortgage are used for other purposes than the direct benefit of the vessel. P. 50.
- 68 F. (2d) 946, reversed.

CERTIORARI, 292 U. S. 619, to review the reversal, for want of jurisdiction, of two decrees entered by the District Court, 56 F. (2d) 455, 2 F. Supp. 733, for the foreclosure of mortgages on two ships.

Mr. Ray M. Stanley, with whom Messrs. Ellis H. Gidley, Ferris D. Stone, and Cleveland Thurber were on the brief, for petitioner.

The Ship Mortgage Act is a logical development of the national policy expressed in the Merchant Marine Act. Sen. Rep., 66th Cong., No. 573.

Under the construction given it by the court below, in every suit in rem brought for the foreclosure of a preferred mortgage the first inquiry will necessarily be whether or not the proceeds, beyond an inconsiderable portion, were devoted to maritime uses. If not, did the mortgagee have knowledge at the time the mortgage was given that the mortgagor intended to apply a substantial part of the proceeds to non-maritime uses? If knowledge or lack of knowledge is disputed, the court must retain jurisdiction in the first instance solely for the purpose of deciding that question of fact. If advance knowledge be found, the court must order a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction. The majority opinion further leaves it to the discretion of individual judges to determine what part of the proceeds may be devoted to non-maritime uses before jurisdiction is destroyed. A mere statement demonstrates the utter fallacy of the reasoning. Jurisdiction may be defeated only by destroying the preferred status of the mortgage itself.

The language of the Act shows that there was no intention to impose any implied limitations on the use of the proceeds.

The purpose of the implied grant of power to legislate on the subject of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction was to place the entire subject matter, both substantive law and procedure, under federal control, because of its intimate relation to interstate and foreign commerce and to navigation, and it may be added—to ships, the sole instruments of navigation. The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, 577; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624; Waring v. Clarke, 5 How. 441; Panama R. Co. v. Johnson, 264 U. S. 375; Southern Pacific Co. v. Jensen, 244 U. S. 205, 215.

The power of Congress to alter, qualify, revise or supplement the general maritime law whenever experience of changing conditions makes it desirable or necessary has been often declared and recently reaffirmed. Crowell v. Benson, 285 U. S. 22; United States v. Flores, 289 U. S. 137.

Illustrations of the repeated exercise by Congress of its power to make substantive changes in the law maritime are found in the Judiciary Act of 1789, providing for seizure under the impost, navigation or trade laws; The Margaret, 9 Wheat. 421; in the Acts providing for limitation of liability; The Main v. Williams, 152 U. S. 122; New Jersey Steam Navigation Co. v. Merchants' Bank, 6 How. 344; Richardson v. Harmon, 222 U. S. 96; in the Act of June 23, 1910 creating an extension of maritime lien for supplies furnished in the home port; Piedmont & G. C. Coal Co. v. Seaboard Fisheries Co., 254 U. S. 1; in the Act of March 4, 1915, known as the Jones Act; Lindgren v. United States, 281 U. S. 38; in the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act of March 4, 1927; Crowell v. Benson, 285 U. S. 22.

In the absence of action by Congress, this Court has the power to modify the maritime law as experience or changing conditions may require, e. g., The Genesee Chief, 12 How. 443.

In the last analysis, the decision in the case of The Genesee Chief, supra, was merely an interpretation of the Constitution, not only in the light of changing conditions and the lessons of experience, but as well because of factors which were not considered when the case of The Thomas Jefferson was decided.

This power of the Court to overrule prior decisions has been frequently exercised (see cases Note 2, dissenting opinion of Brandeis, J., in Burnet v. Coronado Oil & Gas Co., 285 U. S. 393, 407, 408). See Funk v. United States, 290 U. S. 371, wherein an ancient rule of the common law was abrogated—this though there is no national common law. The only apparent limitation on the power of the Court in this regard is the doctrine of stare decisis, which can have no application in the present case.

What was said in Bogart v. The John Jay, 17 How. 399, did not mark the boundary for all time beyond which neither Court nor Congress may go. Cf. The Oconee, 280 Fed. 927; The Nanking, 292 Fed. 642; The Lincoln Land, 295 Fed. 358.

Cases where the validity of the Ship Mortgage Act was assumed are: The Egeria, 294 Fed. 791; The Northern Star, 7 F. (2d) 505; National Bank v. Enterprise Marine Dock Co., 43 F. (2d) 547; Consumer's Co. v. Goodrich Transit Co., 53 F. (2d) 972, cert. den., 286 U. S. 548; The Owego, 292 Fed. 403; The Northern No. 41, 297 Fed. 343; The Moshulu, 298 Fed. 348; The Henry W. Breyer, 17 F. (2d) 423; The Red Lion, 22 F. (2d) 329. Also see Morse Drydock & Repair Co. v. The Northern Star, 271 U. S. 552, and United States v. Flores, 289 U. S. 137.

The opinion in Bogart v. The John Jay, supra, shows that the Court, as then constituted, had no doubt of the power of Congress to so extend the jurisdiction, as had been done in England. See Panama R. Co. v. Johnson, 264 U. S. 375, 386.

Mr. George E. Brand, with whom Mr. Thomas C. Burke was on the brief, for respondents.

Prior to the Ship Mortgage Act, it was settled law that a ship mortgage securing a personal loan to the shipowner was not, ex proprio vigore, foreclosable in admiralty—not because the Congress had not conferred such jurisdiction, but because, under the Constitution as interpreted by this Court, neither the loan, the primary contract, nor the mortgage, the incident thereof, was a maritime contract. The Congress has no power to extend original admiralty jurisdiction to a non-maritime contract.

That this Court was fully conscious of the desirability of making federal admiralty jurisdiction as comprehensive as the needs of navigation, is attested by New Jersey Steam Navigation Co. v. Merchants Bank of Boston, 6 How. 344, and by The Genesee Chief, 12 How. 443, holding that the admiralty jurisdiction was not limited to tide waters. Certainly this Court accorded the constitutional provisions a broad, rather than a restricted interpretation, and in view of such a tendency this Court's refusal to uphold jurisdiction over ship mortgages, in Bogart v. The John Jay, 17 How. 399, is of great significance. To quote from that case:

"This is not so, because such a jurisdiction had been denied by the jealousy of the courts of the common law. Its foundation is, that the mere mortgage of a ship, other than that of an hypothecated bottomry, is a contract without any of the characteristics or attendants of a maritime loan, and is entered into by the parties to it, without reference to navigation or perils of the sea. Such a mortgage has nothing in it analogous to those contracts which are the subjects of admiralty jurisdiction. In such a case, the ship is the object for the accomplishment of the contract, without any reference to the use of her for such a purpose. There cannot be, then, anything maritime in it. A failure to perform such a contract cannot make it maritime."

There was no dissent from this opinion and seven of the Justices who participated in the decision of The Genesee Chief, supra, were still members of this Court. The rule has been consistently followed: Schuchardt v. The Angeliq  , 19 How. 239; People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. 393; Grant Smith-Porter Co. v. Rohda, 257 U. S. 469; Thames Towboat Co. v. The Francis McDonald, 254 U. S. 242; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558; The J. E. Rum-bell, 148 U. S. 1; The Freights of the Kate, 63 Fed. 707.

The bonds are the primary obligations to which the mortgages are mere incidents. Carpenter v. Longan, 16 Wall. 271.

The loans herein were merely personal contracts, in no way involving navigation or the perils of the sea. The mortgages were mere security for performance of the personal contracts and in no way involved the use of the steamers in navigation.

Maritime liens encumber commerce and are stricti juris. Krauss Bros. Lumber Co. v. Dimon S. S. Corp., 290 U. S. 117; Piedmont & George's Creek Coal Co. v. Seaboard Fisheries Co., 254 U. S. 1; The Kalfarli, 277 Fed. 391; People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. 393.

The fact that the contracts involved were not wholly maritime would preclude original admiralty jurisdiction. Grant v. Poillon, 20 How. 162; Piedmont & George's Creek Coal Co. v. Seaboard Fisheries Co., 254 U. S. 1; Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. v. Interlake S. S. Co., 40 F. (2d) 439, cert. den., 282 U. S. 845; The Richard Winstow, 71 Fed. 426; The Milwaukee, 15 F. (2d) 886; El Oriente, 5 F. (2d) 251.

Admiralty courts are not courts of equity. Bogart v. The John Jay, 17 How. 399; People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. 393; Rea v. The Eclipse, 135 U. S. 599; The Ada, 250 Fed. 194; Kellum v. Emerson, Fed. Cas. No. 7669.

The attempted grant of admiralty jurisdiction, if applicable to the mortgages, would deprive the States of reserved jurisdiction over non-maritime contracts because federal admiralty jurisdiction is exclusive. No state statute creating a maritime lien, justiciable in admiralty and thereby waiving reserved state rights, is involved. Subsection K, if applicable, is unconstitutional. People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. 393; The Genesee Chief, 12 How. 443; New England Marine Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 11 Wall. 1.

No interstate commerce is involved in the present controversy. It is significant that in Art. I, § 8 of the Constitution, defining the power of the Congress, the subject of admiralty is not mentioned. The connection of the Congress with that subject is through Art. III, § 1, which permits the Congress to apportion the judicial power conferred by the States but which cannot sustain an arrogated increase of power.

The Congress cannot enlarge the grant of admiralty jurisdiction. Crowell v. Benson, 285 U. S. 22; Meyer v. Tupper, 1 Black 522; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, 588.

Federal admiralty jurisdiction to enforce a lien is exclusive. Subsection K of the Ship Mortgage Act expressly provides that jurisdiction thereunder shall be exclusive. If the Congress, by its fiat, can convert such a mortgage into a maritime lien, the jurisdiction of the State is automatically divested. This cannot be done without the approval of the State or amendment of the Constitution. Cf. The Winnebago, 141 Fed. 945, cert. den., 200 U. S. 616; The Moses Taylor v. Hammons, 4 Wall. 411; Chelentis v. Luckenbach S. S. Co., 247 U. S. 372; The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624; Leon v. Galceran, 11 Wall. 185; Norton v. Switzer, 93 U. S. 355; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1; The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 185; American Steamboat Co. v. Chace, 16 Wall. 522; Perry v. Haines, 191 U. S. 17.

The Congress may prescribe forms, mode and rules of judicial proceedings within the defined admiralty jurisdiction of the courts, but cannot make maritime a non-maritime cause or transaction. Analysis will disclose no decision upholding congressional regulation except as to a matter unquestionably maritime. The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438; Meyer v. Tupper, 1 Black 522.

In Providence & New York S. S. Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., 109 U. S. 578, this Court said:

"The rule of limited liability prescribed by the Act of 1851 is nothing more than the old maritime rule administered in courts of admiralty in all countries except England from time immemorial; and if this were not so, the subject matter itself is one that belongs to the department of maritime law." In that case, the underlying cause of action was unquestionably maritime. The act of Congress merely controlled the procedure relating to the enforcement of that jurisdiction and did no more than alter a rule of recoverable damages in such cases. The same is true of Richardson v. Harmon, 222 U. S. 96, on which petitioner relies, wherein the underlying cause of action was the liability of a ship which, in its navigation, damaged a bridge. Vancouver S. S. Co. v. Rice, 288 U. S. 445; Crowell v. Benson, 285 U. S. 22.

Panama R. Co. v. Johnson, 264 U. S. 375, upheld the Jones Act on the theory that it did not create a maritime cause of action but merely regulated procedure.

To create a lien in connection with a matter already subject to maritime jurisdiction is one thing; but to attempt thereby to create jurisdiction where none existed is another. That the existence of a lien merely has not been an accepted basis of our admiralty jurisdiction is also attested by the fact that under the civil law many liens against ships existed that were not enforceable in original proceedings in rem under our law because the underlying cause of action was, by our courts, held to be non-maritime.

The States have not voluntarily yielded their control over non-maritime mortgages; and until they do, Congress cannot force them to do so by conferring exclusive jurisdiction upon the federal courts. United States v. Flores, 289 U. S. 137, distinguished.

A fair construction of the Ship Mortgage Act justified the holding that it does not apply to the particular mortgages involved. The Act should be so construed.

Essential original admiralty jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent or estoppel.

MR. CHIEF JUSTICE HUGHES delivered the opinion of the Court.

These are suits in admiralty to foreclose two mortgages given by the Barlum Steamship Company upon the vessels "Thomas Barlum" and "John J. Barlum," respectively. The mortgages purported to be preferred mortgages under the Ship Mortgage Act, 1920. 41 Stat. 1000-1006; 46 U. S. C., c. 25, §§ 911-984. The mortgagor, appearing as claimant, contended that the admiralty was without jurisdiction. The District Court overruled that contention and, finding that all the requirements of that Act had been met, entered decrees of foreclosure and sale. 56 F. (2d) 455; 2 F. Supp. 733. In the case of the "John J. Barlum" the decree provided for the recovery by certain seamen, intervening libelants, of amounts due for wages, as preferred maritime liens. The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decrees, holding that the suits should have been dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. 68 F. (2d) 946. This Court granted certiorari. 292 U. S. 619.

The mortgagor at the time the mortgages were executed, was a close corporation, about four-fifths of its shares being owned by John J. Barlum who was also interested in several non-maritime enterprises. The mortgage, in No. 13, on the "Thomas Barlum" was executed in March, 1929, to petitioner, as trustee, to secure $200,000 of bonds which were purchased by petitioner with a definite understanding as to the application of the proceeds. Approximately $50,000 were to meet obligations secured by a prior mortgage upon the same vessel; about $100,000 were to take up loans of John J. Barlum and Thomas Barlum & Sons, a concern which was engaged in a non-maritime enterprise; and the remainder, about $42,000, were to provide for repairs and for refitting the vessels "Thomas Barlum" and "John J. Barlum." The mortgage was executed while the "Thomas Barlum" was laid up.

The mortgage, in No. 14, on the "John J. Barlum" was executed in December, 1927, to petitioner, as trustee, to secure an issue of $200,000 of bonds purchased by petitioner with the understanding that, of the proceeds, petitioner was to retain about $82,000 to cover principal and interest on bonds of John J. Barlum secured by a mortgage on real estate, and about $10,000 to be applied on one of his notes. Most of the remaining proceeds, which were paid over to the mortgagor, was used to take up loans in connection with non-maritime enterprises, only a small part being devoted to payments relating to the operation of the vessels.

In both instances, the bonds secured by the mortgages were negotiable bonds and were purchased by petitioner for sale to the general public and were largely so sold.

There is no question as to the validity of the mortgages or of the bonds which they secure or as to the default in payment. The question is solely one of jurisdiction in admiralty of the foreclosure suits. Respondent contends that the mortgages "were so devoid of connection with maritime purposes" that the provision of the Ship Mortgage Act conferring jurisdiction in admiralty "either does not, or cannot constitutionally, apply."

The Circuit Court of Appeals was divided in opinion. The majority of the judges, without passing on the extent of congressional authority, thought that it was sufficient to point out that the mortgagor and mortgagee knew, before the mortgages were made, that the moneys advanced "were intended for and actually were used for non-maritime purposes," and they concluded that the provisions of the Ship Mortgage Act did not extend to such a case. The minority view, supporting the decision of the District Court, was that the Congress intended to encourage the investment of capital in ships; that it might well be that this object could best be promoted by allowing vessels "to be hypothecated as readily and with the same effect as other personal property"; that a mortgage on a ship would be "a most undesirable security" if purchasers of bonds so secured must at their peril ascertain how moneys advanced upon the mortgage are to be spent; and that Congress had constitutional authority to give to a valid mortgage a preferred status, and to provide for the enforcement of the lien in admiralty, by virtue of its control over ships as essentially marine instrumentalities, a control which includes the promotion of their development and the regulation of their use.

Prior to the enactment of the Ship Mortgage Act, 1920, the admiralty had no jurisdiction of a suit to foreclose a mortgage on a ship. Bogart v. The Steamboat John Jay, 17 How. 399; Schuchardt v. Ship Angelique, 19 How. 239, 241; People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. 393, 400; The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, 583; The Eclipse, 135 U. S. 599, 608; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 15.<sup>1</sup> If jurisdiction in the admiralty of the present suits is to be maintained it must be by reason of the application and validity of the provisions of the Ship Mortgage Act.

1. The application of the statute. The grant of jurisdiction is found in subsection K (46 U. S. C. 951) which provides:

"A preferred mortgage shall constitute a lien upon the mortgaged vessel in the amount of the outstanding mortgage indebtedness secured by such vessel. Upon the default of any term or condition of the mortgage, such lien may be enforced by the mortgagee by suit in rem in admiralty. Original jurisdiction of all such suits is granted to the district courts of the United States exclusively."

<sup>1</sup> See, also, The William D. Rice, 3 Ware 134, 136; The Martha Washington, 3 Ware 245, 251; The Sailor Prince, 1 Ben. 461, 466; Morgan v. Tapscott, 5 Ben. 252; Britton v. The Venture, 21 Fed. 928; The Gordon Campbell, 131 Fed. 963, 965; The Clifton, 143 Fed. 460, 463; The Conveyor, 147 Fed. 586, 589; The Rupert City, 213 Fed. 263, 266.

The grant is thus one of exclusive jurisdiction to enforce the lien of a "preferred mortgage." If the mortgage is a preferred mortgage within the definition of the Act, jurisdiction is granted; otherwise not. "Preferred mortgages" are carefully defined in the detailed provisions of subsection D.<sup>2</sup> 46 U. S. C. 922. The applica-

---

<sup>2</sup> Subsection D is as follows: "Preferred Mortgages. (a) A valid mortgage which, at the time it is made includes the whole of any vessel of the United States of 200 gross tons and upward, shall in addition have, in respect to such vessel and as of the date of the compliance with all the provisions of this subdivision, the preferred status given by the provisions of subsection M, section 953, if—

"(1) The mortgage is indorsed upon the vessel's documents in accordance with the provisions of this chapter;

"(2) The mortgage is recorded as provided in subsection C, section 921, together with the time and date when the mortgage is so endorsed;

"(3) An affidavit is filed with the record of such mortgage to the effect that the mortgage is made in good faith and without any design to hinder, delay, or defraud any existing or future creditor of the mortgagor or any lienor of the mortgaged vessel;

"(4) The mortgage does not stipulate that the mortgagee waives the preferred status thereof; and

"(5) The mortgagee is a citizen of the United States.

"(b) Any mortgage which complies in respect to any vessel with the conditions enumerated in this subsection is hereafter in this chapter called a 'preferred mortgage' as to such vessel.

"(c) There shall be indorsed upon the documents of a vessel covered by a preferred mortgage—

"(1) The names of the mortgagor and mortgagee;

"(2) The time and date the indorsement is made;

"(3) The amount and date of maturity of the mortgage; and

"(4) Any amount required to be indorsed by the provisions of subdivision (e) or (f) of this subsection.

"(d) Such indorsement shall be made (1) by the collector of customs of the port of documentation of the mortgaged vessel, or (2) by the collector of customs of any port in which the vessel is found, if such collector is directed to make the indorsement by the

tion of this term in the subsequent provisions of the Act, including the provision as to admiralty jurisdiction, is not left to inference but is explicitly stated in subdivision (b) of subsection D as follows:

"Any mortgage which complies in respect to any vessel with the conditions enumerated in this subsection is hereafter in this chapter called a 'preferred mortgage' as to such vessel."

Subdivision (a) of subsection D provides that a "valid mortgage," which "includes the whole of any vessel of the United States of 200 gross tons and upward," shall have, in addition, "in respect to such vessel and as of the date of the compliance with all the provisions of this collector of customs of the port of documentation; and no clearance shall be issued to the vessel until such indorsement is made. The collector of customs of the port of documentation shall give such direction by wire or letter at the request of the mortgagee and upon the tender of the cost of communication of such direction. Whenever any new document is issued for the vessel, such indorsement shall be transferred to and indorsed upon the new document by the collector of customs.

---

"(e) A mortgage which includes property other than a vessel shall not be held a preferred mortgage unless the mortgage provides for the separate discharge of such property by the payment of a specified portion of the mortgage indebtedness. If a preferred mortgage so provides for the separate discharge, the amount of the portion of such payment shall be indorsed upon the documents of the vessel.

"(f) If a preferred mortgage includes more than one vessel and provides for the separate discharge of each vessel by the payment of a portion of the mortgage indebtedness, the amount of such portion of such payment shall be indorsed upon the documents of the vessel. In case such mortgage does not provide for the separate discharge of a vessel and the vessel is to be sold upon the order of a district court of the United States in a suit in rem in admiralty, the court shall determine the portion of the mortgage indebtedness increased by 20 per centum (1) which, in the opinion of the court, the approximate value of the vessel bears to the approximate value of all the vessels covered by the mortgage, and (2) upon the payment of which the vessel shall be discharged from the mortgage."

subdivision, the preferred status given by the provisions of subsection M,"<sup>3</sup> 46 U. S. C. 953. The term "vessel of the United States" means any vessel documented under the laws of the United States; and, in the case of a mortgage "involving a trust deed and a bond issue thereunder," the term "mortgagee" means the trustee. Subsection B, 46 U. S. C. 911. The "preferred status" given by subsection M is that, on foreclosure and sale in admiralty, all preëxisting claims in the vessel are to be held terminated and thereafter are to attach to the proceeds of the sale, and the "preferred mortgage lien" is to have priority over all claims against the vessel, except "preferred maritime liens" and expenses, fees and costs allowed by the Court. "Preferred maritime liens" are those arising prior to the recording and indorsement of the mortgage as required, or "a lien for damages arising out of tort, for wages of a stevedore when employed directly by the owner, operator, master, ship's husband, or <sup>3</sup> Subsection M is as follows: "Preferred Maritime Lien; Priorities; Other Liens. (a) When used hereinafter in this chapter, the term 'preferred maritime lien' means (1) a lien arising prior in time to the recording and indorsement of a preferred mortgage in accordance with the provisions of this chapter; or (2) a lien for damages arising out of tort, for wages of a stevedore when employed directly by the owner, operator, master, ship's husband, or agent of the vessel, for wages of the crew of the vessel, for general average, and for salvage, including contract salvage.

"(b) Upon the sale of any mortgaged vessel by order of a district court of the United States in any suit in rem in admiralty for the enforcement of a preferred mortgage lien thereon, all preëxisting claims in the vessel, including any possessory common-law lien of which a lienor is deprived under the provisions of subsection L, section 952, shall be held terminated and shall thereafter attach, in like amount and in accordance with their respective priorities, to the proceeds of the sale; except that the preferred mortgage lien shall have priority over all claims against the vessel, except (1) preferred maritime liens, and (2) expenses and fees allowed and costs taxed, by the court."

agent of the vessel, for wages of the crew of the vessel, for general average, and for salvage, including contract salvage."

The requirements of subdivision (a) of subsection D, which must be met in order to obtain this preferred status, are that the mortgage shall be indorsed upon the vessel's documents and shall be recorded; that an affidavit shall be filed with the record "to the effect that the mortgage is made in good faith and without any design to hinder, delay or defraud any existing or future creditor of the mortgagor or any lienor of the mortgaged vessel"; that the mortgage does not stipulate for a waiver of the preferred status; and that the mortgagee is a citizen of the United States. Subdivisions (c) and (d) of subsection D set forth the nature and manner of the required indorsement upon the documents of the vessel; and subsection C (46 U. S. C. 921), to which subsection D refers, contains detailed provisions as to recording.

Subdivision (e) of subsection D provides that a mortgage which includes property other than a vessel "shall not be held a preferred mortgage" unless there is provision for the separate discharge of such property by the payment of a specified portion of the mortgage indebtedness; subdivision (f) of subsection D makes provision for the case of a mortgage covering more than one vessel. And where a mortgage covers property in addition to vessels, the Act is not to be construed as authorizing a proceeding in rem in admiralty to enforce the rights of the mortgagee in respect to such property. Subsection N,<sup>4</sup> 46 U. S. C. 954.

---

<sup>4</sup> Subdivision (b) of subsection N is as follows: "(b) This chapter shall not be construed, in the case of a mortgage covering, in addition to vessels, realty or personalty other than vessels, or both, to authorize the enforcement by suit in rem in admiralty of the rights of the mortgagee in respect to such realty or personalty other than vessels."

Subsection E (46 U. S. C. 923) imposes the duty upon the mortgagor to keep on board the mortgaged vessel a certified copy of the mortgage and to cause it and the vessel's documents to be exhibited by the master to any person having business with the vessel which may give rise to a maritime lien or to a transfer or mortgage of the vessel. Subsection F (46 U. S. C. 924) requires the mortgagor to disclose to the mortgagee, upon his request, the existence of any maritime lien, prior mortgage, or other obligation or liability of the vessel, that is known to the mortgagor, and prohibits the mortgagor, after the mortgage is executed and before the mortgagee has had reasonable time to record it and to have the necessary indorsements made upon the vessel's documents, from incurring "any contractual obligation creating a lien upon the vessel," other than those liens which are made "preferred maritime liens" as above stated. Provision is also made for the record of notices of claims of lien on the mortgaged vessel, for certificates of discharge of liens, and for the inspection of records and obtaining copies. Subsections G and I, 46 U. S. C. 925, 927. Penalties are provided for failure to exhibit documents and for violation of the Act in other respects; and provision is also made for recovery, by suits in the district courts of the United States, against collectors of customs and mortgagors, or masters of vessels, of damages caused by failure to perform the duties imposed upon them. Subsection J, 46 U. S. C. 941.

An examination of the provisions of the Act leaves no room for doubt that the subject of mortgages of vessels, and, in particular, the priority which should be assigned to them in relation to other liens, was under the close scrutiny of the Congress in determining its policy. But, among all the minute requirements of the Act, we find none as to the application of the proceeds of loans which such mortgages secure. No condition is imposed as to the purposes for which the moneys are lent. While the Congress took care to make distinct provision for cases where a mortgage covers property other than a vessel, no distinction is made as to the status of mortgages of vessels by reason of an intention to devote the borrowed moneys to uses other than maritime. We are not at liberty to imply a condition which is opposed to the explicit terms of the statute. It is enough, so the statute says expressly, that the mortgage is upon a vessel of the United States, that it is a valid mortgage, that it is made in good faith, that it is disclosed by proper indorsements on the vessel's documents and is duly recorded, and that the other conditions, specified in detail, are met. Such a mortgage upon a vessel documented under the laws of the United States, the Congress has undertaken to regulate with respect to priority of lien. If the conditions so laid down are fulfilled, the mortgage is to be a "preferred mortgage" with all the incidents which the Act attaches to it, including the right to bring foreclosure in admiralty. To hold that a mortgage is not within the Act which the Act itself states is within it, is not to construe the Act but to amend it. The question of policy—whether different terms should have been imposed—is not for us. We may not add to the conditions set up by Congress any more than we can subtract from them. They stand, as defined, precise and complete.

We see nothing in the general purpose of the Act which can be deemed to restrict the natural meaning and effect of its language. Rather, the general purpose emphasizes that meaning and effect. The Ship Mortgage Act is a part of the Merchant Marine Act, 1920. 41 Stat. 988. Its declared purpose is "to provide for the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine." The Congress, in its wisdom, decided upon the means to achieve that object and set forth its conclusions in the terms of the statute. The legislative history of the statute shows the controlling considerations. The report of the Senate Committee on Commerce pointed out that "mortgage security on ships" was "practically worthless"; that it was proposed to "make it good except as to certain demands that should be superior to everything else, such as wages"; and that it was desired to have "our people and capital interested in shipping and shipping securities." Sen. Rep. No. 573, 66th Cong., 2d sess., p. 9. The bill, with this purpose, was developed in conference. The managers on the part of the House of Representatives, in their statement accompanying the report of the Committee of Conference, observed that by the enlarged provisions of the bill "the mortgagee under a mortgage upon a vessel of the United States is made more secure in his interest in the vessel than he is under existing admiralty law," and, referring to the plan of "creating a preferred mortgage," added that "the preferred status arises upon the recording of the mortgage as a preferred mortgage and its indorsement upon vessel's documents." There is no suggestion of any requirement as to the use, intended or actual, of the moneys borrowed upon the faith of the mortgage security. H. R. No. 1102, 66th Cong., 2d sess., p. 34; H. R. No. 1107, 66th Cong., 2d sess., p. 31.<sup>5</sup> The measure was enacted in the terms thus proposed.

---

<sup>5</sup> In this statement, the House managers said: "This Senate amendment is an extensive provision by which the mortgagee under a mortgage upon a vessel of the United States is made more secure in his interest in the vessel than he is under existing admiralty law. The amendment supplements the existing mortgage recording provisions by creating a preferred mortgage which in foreclosure proceedings will have priority in the distribution of the proceeds from the sale of the mortgaged vessel over all maritime liens against the vessel except liens for damages arising out of tort, stevedores' and crews' wages, general average, and salvage. The preferred status arises upon the recording of the mortgage as a preferred mortgage and its indorsement upon vessel's documents. Under the Senate amend-

In placing ship mortgages upon a stronger basis as securities, the Congress had in mind, and expressly included, trust deeds securing issues of bonds to the public. Subsection B, 46 U. S. C. 911. It is plain that the fundamental purpose to promote public confidence in such securities, and their extended use as investments, would have been frustrated if purchasers of bonds had to discover at their peril the application of the proceeds of the secured loans, or if their rights depended upon such knowledge as their trustee might have, rather than upon the satisfaction of the statutory conditions and the disclosures, as required, by indorsement on the vessel's documents and recording. But, while contemplating such bond issues, with their obvious practical incidents, the Congress did not set up a special rule for them, or for purchasers of bonds without notice as to the application of proceeds. The Congress made simple, clear and definite conditions ment the foreclosure proceedings are brought in the Federal courts in equity with simulated admiralty procedure under which the court in equity gives a title good against the world, and terminates all pre-existing claims against the vessel. . .

"The House recedes with an amendment which places the constitutional basis of Congress's power to legislate in respect to vessel mortgages, upon the grant of admiralty jurisdiction and the 'necessary and proper clause' of the Constitution, instead of the power to regulate interstate and foreign commerce. The amendment as agreed to further places exclusive jurisdiction in the Federal courts to foreclose vessel mortgages upon the grant of admiralty jurisdiction instead of the provisions of the Constitution relating to diversity of citizenship and cases arising under the laws of the United States. The amendment as agreed to also makes the title granted under the order of a court of admiralty in the case of the libel of a vessel covered by a preferred mortgage good against the world as under the existing admiralty law and international admiralty practice; clarifies the provisions as to fleet mortgages; provides for the reenactment and incorporation in the amendment of the existing vessel mortgage recording provisions, and prevents the repeal of section 4 of the maritime lien act of 1910 in respect to the doctrines of advances and laches."

as to all ship mortgages otherwise valid, and when these were performed the mortgages were to have the status prescribed.

Given the standing of such mortgages in admiralty, which the Congress desired to establish, an omission of a provision as to the use of the moneys borrowed cannot be regarded as anomalous. An analogous principle has been recognized in relation to bottomry and respondentia bonds. Thus, in the case of bottomry bonds, if the conditions of the bottomry attach, such bonds when given by the owner of the vessel have been held to be within the admiralty jurisdiction even if they are given to secure non-maritime outlays. That view was emphatically stated by Justice Story in The Draco, 2 Sumn. 157. There, jurisdiction of the District Court, sitting in admiralty, was challenged upon the ground that the bond in question was not a "fit foundation for a proceeding in rem." Id., p. 174. After a careful review of the historical conception of bottomry bonds, Justice Story concluded (id., p. 186): "In my opinion, there is not the slightest ground to uphold the doctrine, that, in order to constitute a bottomry bond, as such, in the sense of the maritime law, it is necessary that the money should be advanced for the necessities of the ship, or for the cargo, or for the voyage. Where it is given by the master, virtute officii, it must, in order to have validity, be for the ship's necessities; for the implied authority of the master extends no farther. But where it is given by the owner, as dominus navis, he may employ the money, as he pleases. It is sufficient, if the money be lent upon the bottom of the ship, at the risk of the lender, for the voyage." So, in the case of a respondentia loan, it is not necessary that it should be made before the departure of the ship on the voyage or that the money lent should be employed in the outfit of the vessel or invested in the goods on which the risk is run. It matters not, this Court has said, at what time the loan is made, or upon what goods the risk is taken. "If the risk of the voyage be substantially and really taken," and the transaction be otherwise valid, "it is no objection to it, that it was made after the voyage was commenced, nor that the money was appropriated to purposes wholly unconnected with the voyage." The lender is not presumed to lend "upon the faith of any particular appropriation of the money." Conard v. Atlantic Insurance Co., 1 Pet. 386, 437. See Conard v. Nicoll, 4 Pet. 291, 310; 3 Kent's Com., 361; note (e); The Draco, supra, pp. 188, 189.

It is also to be noted that the jurisdiction granted to the admiralty by the Ship Mortgage Act is exclusive. If a mortgage is within the Act, there can be no suit to foreclose it in a state court;<sup>6</sup> if the mortgage is not within the Act, there can be no suit for foreclosure in the admiralty. It cannot be doubted that the Congress recognized the importance of basing the jurisdiction, as thus sought to be conferred, upon precise statutory conditions. We find no warrant for leaving it to be tested by extrinsic criteria, raising a host of questions as to the application of the proceeds of loans, in the solution of which the statute affords no aid.

We conclude that the Court had jurisdiction of the suits provided the Congress had authority to grant it.

2. The validity of the grant of jurisdiction. The Congress rested its authority upon the constitutional provisions extending the judicial power "to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction" and conferring upon the Congress the power to make all laws which shall be "necessary and proper" for carrying into execution all powers "vested by this Constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof." Art. III, § 2; Art. I, § 8, par. 18.<sup>7</sup> This authority was not confined to the cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction in England when the Constitution was adopted. Waring v. Clarke, 5 How. 441, 457, 458. The limitations which had been imposed upon the high court of admiralty in the course of its controversy with the courts of common law were not read into the grant. But the grant presupposed a "general system of maritime law" which was familiar to the lawyers and statesmen of the country, and contemplated a body of law with uniform operation. The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, 574, 575. The Constitution did not undertake to define the precise limits of that body of law or to lay down a criterion for drawing the boundary between maritime law and local law. Id. Boundaries were to be determined in the exercise of the judicial power in recognition of the purpose of the grant. "No state law can enlarge it, nor can an act of Congress or rule of court make it broader than the judicial power may determine to be its true limits." The St. Lawrence, 1 Black 522, 527. The framers of the Constitution did not contemplate that the maritime law should remain unalterable. The purpose was to place the entire subject, including its substantive as well as its procedural features, under national control. From the beginning the grant was regarded as implicitly investing legislative power for that purpose in the United States. When the Constitution was adopted, the existing maritime law became the law of the United States "subject to power in Congress to modify or supplement it as experience or changing conditions might require." Panama Railroad Co. v. Johnson, 264 U. S. 375, 385-387. The Congress thus has paramount power to determine the maritime law which shall prevail throughout the country. The Lottawanna, supra, p. 577; Butler v. Boston & Savannah S. S. Co., 130 U. S. 527, 557; In re Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 13; Southern Pacific Co. v. Jensen, 244 U. S. 205, 215; Crowell v. Benson, 285 U. S. 22, 39; United States v. Flores, 289 U. S. 137, 148, 149. But in amending and revising the maritime law, the Congress necessarily acts within a sphere restricted by the concept of the admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. The Belfast, 7 Wall. 624, 641; Panama Railroad Co. v. Johnson, supra; Crowell v. Benson, supra, p. 55.

<sup>6</sup> See Note 5.

<sup>7</sup> See Note 5.

The Congress began the exertion of this authority at an early date. In the Judiciary Act of 1789, the Congress conferred upon the district courts of the United States exclusive jurisdiction of all seizures under the laws of impost, navigation, or trade of the United States, where the seizures were made on navigable waters within the respective districts. § 9, 1 Stat. 76, 77. Waring v. Clarke, supra, p. 458; The Margaret, 9 Wheat. 421, 427. By the Act of June 19, 1813, 3 Stat. 2, the Congress declared that a vessel employed in a fishing voyage should be answerable for the fishermen's share of the fish caught, upon a contract made on land, in the same form and to the same effect as any other vessel is liable to be proceeded against for the wages of seamen. Waring v. Clarke, supra. Important illustrations of the exercise of congressional power are found in the Limitation of Liability Act of 1851, 9 Stat. 635, enacted for the purpose of encouraging investment in shipbuilding, by limiting the venture of shipowners to the loss of the ship itself, or her freight then pending, in cases of damage occasioned without the owner's privity or knowledge (Norwich Co. v. Wright, 13 Wall. 104; Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. v. Southern Pacific Co., 273 U. S. 207, 214); the extension, by the Act of June 26, 1884, § 18, 23 Stat. 57, 58, of the admiralty jurisdiction to proceedings for the limitation of liability, so as to include damages by a vessel to a land structure (The Plymouth, 3 Wall. 20; Cleveland Terminal & V. R. Co. v. Steamship Co., 208 U. S. 316; Richardson v. Harmon, 222 U. S. 96, 101, 106); the Act of 1910, 36 Stat. 604, providing for a maritime lien for repairs or supplies furnished to a vessel in her home port, to be enforced by a proceeding in rem (The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438, 443; The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. 409, 420; The J. E. Rumbell, 148 U. S. 1, 12; Piedmont & G. C. Coal Co. v. Seaboard Fisheries Co., 254 U. S. 1, 11); the Act of March 30, 1920, 41 Stat. 537, providing for jurisdiction in admiralty of suits for damages from death caused by wrongful act and occurring on the high seas (The Hamilton, 207 U. S. 398; Western Fuel Co. v. Garcia, 257 U. S. 233, 243; Lindgren v. United States, 281 U. S. 38, 48); the Seamen's Act of 1915, § 20, 38 Stat. 1185 (Chelentis v. Luckenbach Steamship Co., 247 U. S. 372, 384); the Merchant Marine Act of 1920, 41 Stat. 1007, amending § 20 of the Act of 1915, thus bringing, in relation to seamen, into the maritime law, rules drawn from the Federal Employers' Liability Act (Panama Railroad Co. v. Johnson, supra; Engel v. Davenport, 271 U. S. 33, 35; Panama Railroad Co. v. Vasquez, 271 U. S. 557, 559; Northern Coal Co. v. Strand, 278 U. S. 142, 147); and the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act of 1927, 44 Stat. 1424 (Nogueira v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. Co., 281 U. S. 128; Crowell v. Benson, supra).

Of special significance, in relation to the present question, are the Acts of 1884 and 1910, supra. By the former, the admiralty jurisdiction in limitation proceedings was enlarged so as to embrace the liability for a non-maritime tort. Although the damaged structure was on land, the injury was due to the operation of the vessel, and it could not be said that the Congress had stepped beyond the limits of its authority to amend the law in furthering its policy to encourage investments in ships. Richardson v. Harmon, supra. Compare The Blackheath, 195 U. S. 361, 367, 368. The Act of 1910 created a lien to be enforced in rem for repairs or supplies to vessels in their home ports. The state of the law as it existed before that enactment was fully described in The J. E. Rumbell, supra. For repairs or supplies furnished to a vessel in a foreign port, a lien was given by the general maritime law and could be enforced in admiralty, but for repairs or supplies in the home port, no lien existed, or could be enforced in admiralty under the general law, independently of local statute. When the statute of a State gave a lien to be enforced by process in rem against the vessel for repairs or supplies in her home port, that lien, being similar to the lien arising in a foreign port under the general law, was deemed to be in the nature of a maritime lien and therefore could be enforced in admiralty, and, in such case the enforcement of the lien was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts of the United States sitting in admiralty. The result was that where necessities were furnished to a vessel in her home port, the vessel could not be sued in the federal courts under the general maritime law, for that law was not deemed to confer a lien, and could not be sued in a state court, for that court could not enforce the lien created by the state law, but the lien so given might be enforced in admiralty.<sup>8</sup> The Act of 1910 abolished the artificial distinction between repairs and supplies in a home port and those in a foreign port. While it created a lien where in the absence of local provision therefor, none had theretofore existed, the change was not deemed to be inconsistent with the general principles of the maritime law and it effected a substitution of a single federal statute for the conflicting state statutes. Piedmont & G. C. Coal Co. v. Seaboard Fisheries Co., supra. The Act of 1910 also provided that it should not be necessary "to allege or prove" that credit was given to the vessel; previously, supplies furnished to the vessel at the home port, or on the owner's order, were presumed to be furnished upon his personal credit and created no lien. Id.

---

<sup>8</sup> See Benedict's Admiralty, 5th ed., §§ 87, 88.

Respondent, in attacking the grant of jurisdiction by the Ship Mortgage Act, relies strongly upon the reasoning of the Court in Bogart v. The Steamboat John Jay, supra, which denied, under the former law, jurisdiction in admiralty to enforce payment of a mortgage upon a vessel. The Court there said that neither in England<sup>9</sup> nor in the United States had the admiralty courts exercised jurisdiction in questions of property between a mortgagee and the owner; that the foundation of the rule was "that the mere mortgage of a ship, other than that of an hypothecated bottomry," was a contract "without any of the characteristics or attendants of a maritime loan" and was made "without reference to navigation or perils of the sea"; that it was a security "to make the performance of the mortgagor's undertaking more certain"; that, while the mortgagor continued in possession of the ship, the mortgagee was disconnected "from all agency and interest in the employment and navigation of her, and from all responsibility for contracts made on her account"; that there was nothing maritime in the contract; and that from the organization of courts of admiralty and their modes of proceeding they cannot secure to the parties to the mortgage "the remedies and protection which they have in a court of chancery."

But it did not follow, because this view was taken of the existing law, that the Congress was without power to amend the law so as to enable the admiralty courts to take cognizance of mortgages on ships, and to regulate priorities of liens, in order to promote investment in shipping securities and thus to advance the maritime interests of the United States. Indeed, in the Bogart case the Court seemed to recognize the existence of that constitutional authority. For the Court, in concluding its opinion, observed that the policy of commerce and its exigencies in England had given to its admiralty courts a more ample jurisdiction in respect to mortgages of ships than they had under the former rule. And the Court pointed out that this "enlarged cognizance of mortgages" had been given by statute 3 and 4 Victoria, chap. 65, and said that "until this shall be done in the United States by congress, the rule, in this particular, must continue in the admiralty courts of the United States as it has been."

---

<sup>9</sup> See The Neptune, 3 Hagg. 129 (132).

The significance of this suggestion cannot be overlooked. The fact that mortgages on ships had not been considered to be maritime contracts was not conclusive as to the constitutional authority of the Congress to alter or supplement the maritime law in this respect, and thus to extend the admiralty jurisdiction, "as experience or changing conditions might require," while keeping within a proper conception of maritime concerns. The ship, documented under the laws of the United States, is the instrumentality of our maritime enterprise, the prime object of our maritime policy. The ship "from the moment her keel touches the water" becomes "a subject of admiralty jurisdiction"; she acquires personality; she becomes competent to contract, is individually liable for her obligations, and is responsible for her torts. Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424, 438. The existence of the ship, the investments which make that existence possible, is the necessary postulate of maritime liens. We cannot fail to regard the encouragement of investments "in shipping and shipping securities"—the objective of the Ship Mortgage Act—as an essential prerogative of the Congress in the exercise of its wide discretion as to the appropriate development of the maritime law of the country. The regulation of the priorities of ship mortgages in relation to other liens, and the conferring of jurisdiction in admiralty in order to enforce this regulation, are appropriate means to that legitimate end.

The enlargement of the cognizance of mortgages of ships, in the admiralty courts in England, nearly one hundred years ago, to which the Court referred in the Bogart case, was to remedy an evil which had been found to exist. The purpose was "to enable the Court to exercise its ordinary jurisdiction to the full extent."<sup>10</sup> That Act applied whenever the ship was "under arrest by process issuing from the high court of admiralty" or the proceeds of a ship so arrested had been brought into the registry of the court, and the court was invested with "full jurisdiction to take cognizance of all claims and causes of action of any person in respect to any mortgage of such ship or vessel, and to decide any suit instituted by any such person in respect of any such claims or causes of action respectively." 3 & 4 Vict., c. 65, §§ 3, 4. These provisions were expanded by later legislation. The admiralty court in England has jurisdiction in respect of any mortgage duly registered according to the provisions of the Merchant Marine Act, 1894, "whether or not the ship or proceeds are under the arrest of the Court, and such jurisdiction may be exercised by an action in rem or in personam." Roscoe's Admiralty Practice, 5th ed., p. 51.

This response "to the exigencies of commerce" has had its counterpart in the legislation of other European States. It may be said that the "general maritime law" takes cognizance of mortgages of ships, provides for their registration, and establishes rules with respect to priorities.<sup>11</sup>

<sup>10</sup> See statement of Dr. Lushington in The Fortitude, 2 Wm. Rob. 217, 222.

<sup>11</sup> See, e. g., The Netherlands, Maritime Law, Code of Commerce, 1838; France, Act of July 10, 1885, and Decree of June 18, 1886; Belgium, Laws of August 21, 1879, June 12, 1902, February 10, 1908, and September 4, 1908; Denmark, Maritime Law of April 1, 1892, Act 103 of April 29, 1913, also Act 57 of April 1, 1892; Italy, Maritime Law, Code of Commerce of 1883, and Mercantile Marine Code,

Prior to the Ship Mortgage Act the right of the mortgagee to intervene as a claimant of proceeds of a vessel sold by process in the admiralty was recognized and was frequently exercised. Schuchardt v. Ship Angelique, supra; The Lottawanna, supra; The J. E. Rumbell, supra. The distinction between such an intervention and an original proceeding by the mortgagee was no doubt controlling as a matter of jurisdiction and procedure under the law as it then existed, but it cannot be considered as establishing a criterion of the constitutional power of the Congress in defining jurisdiction and procedure. The Congress undoubtedly could determine the priorities that should be recognized by the admiralty court and, having that authority, the Congress could fix the conditions upon which mortgages of ships documented under the laws of the United States should have the priority specified. The grant of jurisdiction in admiralty to entertain a suit by the mortgagee, where the mortgage complies with the prescribed conditions, in order to enforce the permitted lien against the vessel, is, after all, but a provision of suitable machinery to give effect to the rights which the Congress has created.

If it be concluded, and we think it must be, that the Congress has this power in the case of the mortgage of a vessel to provide for its acquisition, or for the discharge of preëxisting liens, or for its necessities, that is, to authorize the enforcement by suits in admiralty of mortgages given to secure loans for the direct benefit of the vessel, we perceive no ground to deny to the Congress constitutional power to make similar provision as to mort-

---

1866, as amended; Norway, Maritime Law of July 20, 1893, as amended by Acts of May 4, 1901, July 13, 1917, and July 9, 1920. See, Constant, "The Law Relating to the Mortgage of Ships," Appendix A; "The Progress of Continental Law in the 19th Century," Georges Ripert, Maritime Law, Continental Legal History Series, p. 399.

gages of ships, which comply with its rules, although the proceeds of the loans thereby secured are used for other purposes. The analogy of the decision by Justice Story in The Draco case, supra, as to bottomry bonds, and of the decision of this Court in the Conard case, supra, as to respondentia bonds, is apparent. If the maritime law does not require, as Justice Story held, that a bottomry bond, as such, must be given for the necessities of the ship or for the cargo or for the voyage, but that it is sufficient, when given by the owner, that the money be lent upon the bottom of the ship, at the risk of the lender, for the voyage, and that in such case the owner is free to employ the money as he pleases; if, as this Court decided, in the case of a respondentia loan, it is no objection that it is made after the departure of the ship, or that the money lent was not employed in the outfit of the vessel, or invested in the goods on which the risk was run, or that the money was appropriated for purposes wholly unconnected with the voyage, we cannot see that an analogous provision with respect to ship mortgages is so far inconsistent with the fundamental principles of maritime law as to place such mortgages beyond the authority of the Congress in determining the admiralty jurisdiction. The contention to the contrary loses sight of the dominant purpose of the Act, a purpose which the Congress was competent to achieve. That purpose, we repeat, was to establish the worth of "shipping securities," in the interest of the merchant marine. In order to create public confidence in such securities, in obligations issued on the faith of ship mortgages, the Congress deemed it necessary, not to hamper their issue or enforcement by compelling inquiries as to the application of loans, but to give a definite and assured character to such mortgages provided they met certain simple conditions. The Congress in the exercise of its discretion was entitled to consider the methods by which securities are issued to the public and dealt in, and the well-known usages of business in this regard amply support its judgment.

The authority of the Congress to enact legislation of this nature was not limited by previous decisions as to the extent of the admiralty jurisdiction. We have had abundant reason to realize that our experience and new conditions give rise to new conceptions of maritime concerns. These may require that former criteria of jurisdiction be abandoned, as, for example, they were abandoned in discarding the doctrine that the admiralty jurisdiction was limited to tidewaters. The Genesee Chief, 12 How. 443, overruling The Thomas Jefferson, 10 Wheat. 428.

The constitutional validity of the grant of jurisdiction by the Ship Mortgage Act has been sustained in The Oconee, 280 Fed. 927, in The Nanking, 290 Fed. 769, and in The Lincoln Land, 295 Fed. 358.<sup>12</sup> We find no reason for reaching a contrary conclusion in the instant cases.

The decrees of the Circuit Court of Appeals are reversed and the causes are remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed.

---

LYNCH ET AL. v. NEW YORK EX REL. PIERSON.

CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF NEW YORK.

No. 1. Argued October 9, 1934.—Decided November 5, 1934.

1. Jurisdiction to review a judgment of a state court can not be founded upon surmise or be sustained by reference to briefs and

---

<sup>12</sup> The validity of the Act was not questioned in Morse Drydock & Repair Co. v. The Northern Star, 271 U. S. 552, 555, 556 and its validity has been assumed in several decisions in the lower federal courts. See The Egeria (C. C. A. 9th), 294 Fed. 791; The Northern No. 41 (S. D. Fla.), 297 Fed. 343; The Red Lion (E. D. N. Y.), 22 F. (2d) 329; National Bank v. Enterprise Marine Dock Co. (C. C. A. 4th), 43 F. (2d) 547; Consumers Co. v. Goodrich Transit Co. (C. C. A. 7th), 53 F. (2d) 972.